French Colonialism
POLS 333 Advanced Topics in Global Politics (3)

Prof. Jon Goldberg-Hiller

This course is designed to introduce several significant themes regarding French colonialism, including the philosophical, political and social consequences of colonialism for French cultural life today. French colonialism has a long history that has persisted throughout the modern period; isolating its historical impact is not simple, nor can we be comprehensive in a single course. Our goals here are to preliminarily theorize the relevance of French colonialism and imperialism for limited aspects of contemporary French philosophy, governance, society, art, film, and music. This course will emphasize the influence of colonialism in the twentieth century and examine several disparate sites of colonial control, including sub-Saharan Africa, Indochina, the Pacific, and Algeria, as well as metropolitan France.

The course will examine the following questions: In what ways has French colonialism expressed and transformed French political ideals and social relations? In what ways do cinema, literature, and art express the meanings of colonial control including resistance to French policy and common attitudes towards empire? In what ways have writers who experienced colonialism spoken back to metropolitan France?

Students will gain knowledge of French colonial history and cultural criticism. In addition, students will build context for analysis of the poetry of Aimé Césaire, the philosophy and political theory of Jean-Paul Sartre and Frantz Fanon, and cinematic theory of Sembene Ousmane and others.

Students will be expected to write two papers, 8-10 pages long, and turn in drafts of these papers prior to their due dates. This course will fulfill a Writing Intensive (W) focus. The course will be conducted in English. However, should you choose, you may complete your writing assignments in French.

Students will be asked to buy one book (Blanchard, Pascal, Sandrine Lemaire, Nicolas Bancel, Dominic Richard David Thomas, and Alexis Pernsteiner, eds. Colonial Culture in France since the Revolution. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 2014.) which costs $9.99 in electronic form. Other readings will be available on the course website.

Student learning outcomes:

- Analyze orally and in writing primary texts and secondary Colonial texts, including films and art work.
- Identify and differentiate central cultural themes pertaining to various sites of French colonialism
- Demonstrate an understanding of how colonial themes are presented popularly, and how they are resisted through various media
• Demonstrate ability to research primary and secondary sources using bibliographic tools, read and comprehend secondary sources, and write coherently
